THREE GO TO PENITENTIARY

LIST OF CIVIL CASES WERE LARGELY DISPOSED OF.

The One Case Fought Resulted in Verdict of $15.25 for a Dog.

The case of Com. vs. John Hart, charged with assault and battery on oath of James Noel was on trial when we went to press last week and verdict of jury was not brought in until Wednesday morning. There was a number of witnesses and beer figured prominently in the fight. The jury found a verdict not guilty and put one half of the costs on the defendant and the half on the prosecutor. John Hart was later discharged from jail as an insolvent. The situation of the Valley View hotel differs from every other hotel in the county and is to a certain extent responsible for the complaints as to that place. Every other hotel is in a town surrounded by a community which helps to preserve the peace. There are but six houses about the Valley View hotel and none of them close. In speaking with a Hanover citizen of the testimony of the character of the hotel as developed on this trial and hearing of the license application and remonstrance and the rough element of Hanover that frequents the place, he laughed and said, well the hotel is a good thing for Hanover for we get rid of the element that goes there. The necessary result is that when there is lawlessness there Adams County pays the criminal court expenses.

Com. vs. Joseph Hart, charged with assault and battery on oath of Percy Noel was not pressed on motion of District Attorney as soon as verdict was rendered in case against John Hart.

The next criminal case tried Wednesday morning was Com. vs. Sam. Dawson and Lewis Myers, charged with assault and battery, with intent to murder on information of Geo. Kitterl. The defendants and prosecutor were colored men, the latter being a cripple and when the defendants had loaded up with too much rum and came across prosecutor without provocation began shooting at him. The jury found defendants guilty. The defendants plead guilty to charge of carrying concealed weapons.

Com. vs. Ambrose Dittenhafer, charged on oath of Martin Herman with larceny of chickens was next tried. How Herman found him in act of taking a chicken and shot at him and his flight and capture after being several weeks at large has been told in recent issues of this paper. After two witnesses had been heard Dittenhafer entered a plea of guilty.

Com. vs. Karl E. Katz found guilty of selling liquor without a license, motion for new trial was ordered for argument March 1.

Sentences.

The prisoners were sentenced on Saturday afternoon.

Sam. Dawson the leader in the shooting of the crippled colored man, Geo. Kitterl, was sentenced to two years in the Penitentiary and Lewis Myers his companion to one year.

Ambros Dittenhafer, by reason of the appeal made by his wife for herself and three small children was sentenced to one year in the Penitentiary. The shortest sentence it was possible to give. Dittenhafer promised if this sentence was shown he would behave when time was up and intimated he would remove from the county.

Harry Wilson, who plead guilty to stealing meat while intoxicated near New Oxford, and selling it to get rum was an Irishman who told a tale that appealed, and secured for him a sentence.

Civil Cases.

The trial list of seventeen cases might be said to have been beaten to a frazzle for when the Court adjourned there were but five cases continued to the April court, three of them, the two cases of Odd Fellows Hall of York Springs vs. Lovina Peters and case of First National Bank of Gettysburg vs. G. Milton Bair and Emory Bair having been continued on account of sickness of J. L. Butt, Esq., who has returned to his office after having been confined to house for two weeks. The other two cases continued were those of Paris Erb vs. Howard Hartman suit over wages; Martha J. Ocker Esq., vs. Milton H. Plank, Admr. of Henry C. Frick, for alleged damages growing out of sale of Ocker House of Littleton.

The cases settled or disposed of without trial were the following:

The Nelson Construction Co. vs. The County of Adams was discontinued by the plaintiff.

Win. H. Grogg vs. F. K. Hafer assumption on $1000 note was settled by full payment of note.

I. S. Miller vs. F. K. Hafer assumption on $200 note, settled by full payment of note.

Cambridge Coal Co. vs. Calvin Gilbert, $30 coal bill, settled by payment of the same.

Rockdale Powder Co. vs. Lewis Mizell, settled by judgment taken by the plaintiff for $633.36.

South Mountain Oil and Developing Co. vs. Ghordias C. Oviatt, assumption on contract of drilling oil well, plaintiff having failed to give security for costs, rule for costs was made absolute and judgment of non-suit entered in favor of defendant and against the plaintiff.

Fred. Delheimer & Co. vs. Carrie L. Stine, trading as The Gettysburg Jewelry Co. was settled by judgment in favor of plaintiff and against defendant for $600.47.

The two cases involving the damages for right of way of the Littleton branch of Hanover and McSherrystown railway was settled as previously noted.

Cases Tried.

Two cases were tried and one was fixed for trial on a later date in this month.

Sallie Schriner vs. C. F. Baker, was an action of assumption. Plaintiff bought a piano of defendant, a dealer of Harrisburg, and after payment discovered the piano was not as represented and guaranteed and brought suit for damages. The defendant did not appear and jury after hearing the testimony awarded the plaintiff damages of $250.00.

The one civil case tried and fought to finish was a dog case between J. H. Strasburger vs. Allen Hartman. It wasn't a blooded dog, nor prize dog, nor dog with a pedigree, but it is going to cost some one what a good dog would. It was an ugly black cur with a gray streak on one side. There seems to have been nothing attractive about it but it had an owner, the plaintiff, and the defendant shot it. The former contended the shooting was done on the public road where the dog had as much right as the man. The defendant alleged that the dog jumped over the fence into his yard and came at him and he let him have a load of shot and that he then jumped back over the fence and died in the road. The jury brought in a verdict in favor of plaintiff for $15.25 which with the costs and witness fees ought to be worth some kind of a blooded dog.

L. M. Buehler Successful.

After a great deal of effort and correspondence L. M. Buehler the popular druggist has succeeded in getting the Dr. Howard Co. in making special half price introductory offer on the regular fifty cent size of their celebrated specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia.

Dr. Howard's specific has been so remarkably successful in curing constipation, dyspepsia and all liver troubles, that L. M. Buehler is willing to return the price paid in every case where it does not give relief.

Headaches, coated tongue, dizziness, gas on stomach, speck before the eyes, constipation, and all forms of liver and stomach trouble are soon cured by this scientific medicine.

So great is the demand for this specific that L. M. Buehler has been able to secure only a limited supply, and every one who is troubled with dyspepsia, constipation or liver trouble should call upon him at once or send 25 cents, and get sixty doses of the best medicine ever made, on this special half price offer with his personal guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure.

Druggists in this town and vicinity, when shown the prescription, stated that they can either supply these ingredients, or if our readers prefer, they will compound the mixture for them.

The exhibition plans out and profitable. Americans are interested in the old pictures belonging to their own country and all Gettysburgians interested in their own artists so that the High School feels it is offering the town a most enjoyable entertainment.

Tickets for ten cents may be bought from the P. S. children or at the door of the assembly room of the Meade Building where the exhibition will be held on Friday, February 5th from 3 to 4 P. M. and Saturday, February 6th from 1:30 to 4 P. M.

Courtships of Lincoln

By James A. Edgerton

Copyright, 1908, by the American Press Association

Most men have several affairs of the heart, and little or nothing is said about them. With Lincoln it is different. His courtships are magnified, torn to pieces, paraded before the world, his tenderest emotions being dissected and laid bare in a manner the most callous. His despair over the death of one sweetheart, his letters to another, his misunderstandings with a third, who finally became Mrs. Lincoln—all are set forth to the last detail. They are only such experiences as occur to most men, with variations, of course, to fit each individual case. With others they are considered sacred, however, and if mentioned at all it is with a delicacy which one would wish shown to his own love affairs. It seems to be the price of greatness that nothing is sacred. If the future immortal whispers tender nothings in a corner they are afterward bawled from the housetops. If he so much as casts a melting glance at some fair one it is photographed for the inspection of future ages.

There are three affairs in the life of the martyr president, and a fourth is hinted at by at least one biographer. The average man can remember an equal number and perhaps several more. The beauty with Lincoln is that that Lincoln's were better and more to the point. He might have been a little taller and more homely than most, but if so what of it? There was nothing about all these circumstances to cause a man to be kind or certain to them. They were the shop of the oyster, but gave no sound actions of the pearl inside.

Yet there are beautiful things and such as can be spoken of with propriety and respect in the love affair and the home life of Abraham Lincoln. His despair at the death of Ann Rutledge, his agony over the "snows beating on her grave," the fears of his friends for his sanity, which went to the length of taking precautions against his possible suicide—all this presents a touching and pathetic picture.

As for the affair with Mary Owens, there is nothing in it worthy a passing notice except that it showed a fine sense of honor on the part of Lincoln and an unselfish thoughtfulness for the happiness of his future wife.

About the courtship with the woman he finally married and about his home life with her there has been more or less dispute. Herndon's exploded story that Lincoln ran away on his marriage night has already been mentioned. With quite as much particularity Lamont states that at this time Mr. Lincoln was really in love with a Miss Edwards, who lived in the same house with his fiancee, and that this fact accounts for his dejection, which was then more pronounced than usual and also for the long delay in his marriage to Miss Todd. So far as the writer is aware no other biographer mentions the alleged infatuation for Miss Edwards.

That Mr. Lincoln was to some extent unhappy in his married life is a fact disputed by none. The degree of this unhappiness has probably been exaggerated. Moreover, there have been so many slighting references to Mrs. Lincoln that I feel like taking up the cudgels in her behalf. That she had a temper is probably true. A temper is not necessarily bad thing. Mr. Lincoln himself had a prodigious temper when it was aroused. So bad Washington. So has every man or woman that amounts to anything.

But there is this much to be said for the wife of Abraham Lincoln. She loved him, as was shown by the fact that she married him despite his long delay. While Herndon's story about the marriage night dereliction is probably untrue, there was some kindred happening at about that time. Another thing that can be said in Mrs. Lincoln's behalf is that she showed enough discrimination to prefer Abraham Lincoln to Stephen A. Douglas. Under the circumstances this required true insight into character. Douglas when he paid court to her was already a great man, which was not so apparent in Lincoln's case. Douglas was brilliant, polished and had a most winning manner, while Lincoln was more or less uncouth and shy in feminine society. Miss Todd was the daughter of a leading man of Kentucky, and thus Douglas belonged to her own social class in those outward things which make up class distinctions, while Lincoln did not. Nevertheless she chose Lincoln. She is entitled to honor for both her vision and her heart.

Miss Todd always said that she would marry a president of the United States. No ordinary woman would have had the courage to say that in the face of the ridicule it would occasion, and no one but a very extraordinary woman would have had the ability to pick the winner.

Is it not just possible that some of Lincoln's biographers have overdrawn his unhappiness at home just as they have unduly emphasized his poverty and have done positive injustice to his father? Is it not possible that there was some resentment due to the fact that Miss Todd belonged to an aristocratic family and did not share her husband's views on slavery? And is it not more than possible that there has been an undue prying into the private affairs of both Mr. Lincoln and his wife?

Lincoln's great love for his children which caused him to err, if at all, on the side of too great indulgence, would not indicate a wholly unhappy home life. The fact that Mrs. Lincoln was loyal to her husband and his ambition, that she shared his great life, that she bore double sorrows in the death of her sons and his own assassination and that she endured so much abuse from biographers without murmur entitles her to our charity and respect. She was a woman, a wife and mother. She is dead. Common chivalry and common humanity would at least dictate that nothing should be said of her now except in loving tenderness; if not that, silence.

For one I am tired of much of the utterly trivial stuff written about Abraham Lincoln. He was a great enough man to be treated in a great manner. He had an innate dignity and fitness that call for respect from those who would show his true spirit to the world.

His domestic life was utterly white. The same high honor, the same thoughtfulness for the happiness of others, the same patient and forbearance, the same gentle and kind nature, are found in his courtships and his home that appear in all his other relations and deeds. He was so much greater than his early environment and associates that there is little gained by dwelling upon them.

Abraham Lincoln as we have come to know him appeals to all men because he is so like what all men want to be. He appeals to all boys because he shows them their possibilities. He appeals to all women because he is so much the lover and because he proves that the strongest manhood may be as tender as the gentlest womanhood.
